Extension for a next generation keyboard Macro feature for Opera and for Mozilla Firefox. KEYMACRO is based on the concept of 'user-defined keyboard shortcuts' and is a product of more than five years of research and development. It allows to create macros, record keyboard actions, find and edit shortcuts, define keyboard shortcuts for all web browsers and keystroke combinations in one place. KEYMACRO allows to extend functionality of the mouse or all touch screens, to control Opera and Firefox from other applications. The Opera Browser's Notes are a complete note management system which provides you with several ways to store your notes and to display them. When you are working in another browser or tab, you can easily switch back to Notes by selecting them from the Bookmarks menu or by using the Opera Notes shortcut. You can search for notes by their tags, title, date or contents. You can also drag and drop notes to reorganize the list. [Opera](| [Opera Store](| [Opera Support](Q: Windows Server 2003 where RDC (remote desktop) is stored? We are trying to backup a server running Windows Server 2003 (which is domain controller as well). The only way we are able to backup the entire machine is by mounting the drive and using "backup and restore" via disk management. However, after backing up and restoring the entire drive and trying to RDC to it, we get the following message: Remote desktop cannot connect to this computer. The remote computer may not be ready, the shared secret may be incorrect, or the authentication may be disabled. Please try again later. Connections will not be established. If you select "Access this computer remotely" and enter the IP address, we are able to access the machine, but with no RDC. Does anyone know where this setting is? Thanks. A: If this is a Server 2003 R2 system, you need to look at the Group Policy and modify the properties for RDP. This link will provide the configuration details: There are a couple of settings you need to modify: Remote Desktop Session Host Configuration - IP address must be correct Remote Desktop Session Host Configuration - Authentication - Windows Password (if you have a domain account) or a local username and password There is also a site where you can get a copy of this policy (the entire windows directory - XML) located here:

Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to output buffers. More specifically, the present invention relates to a buffer with a floating output which is capable of accommodating signals with different power levels. 2. State of the Art Integrated circuits are commonly used for a wide variety of electronic applications including radios, televisions, stereo systems, cellular phones, and personal computing devices, to name but a few. A typical integrated circuit includes many individual transistors formed in a semiconductor substrate. The transistors are interconnected to form circuits, which, when combined with other circuits, form the integrated circuit. A basic problem in the fabrication of integrated circuits is the output of an integrated circuit is low. Thus, the output of an integrated circuit may only swing in one direction. This can be problematic, for example, when an integrated circuit is to drive other circuits, which may have a high output impedance. For example, an amplifier used in audio systems may typically have a high output impedance, making the amplifier unsuitable for driving integrated circuits with low output drive capability. One approach to the problem of low output drive capability is the use of an output buffer. An output buffer may include a transistor, which switches current from an output line to ground in response to a high voltage. The output line is driven, for example, to the supply voltage of the integrated circuit, so that the output line typically has a logic high voltage. In an example, if the output line is driven to a logic high voltage of one volt, and the output drive capability of
