May 25, 2020 One of the reviewers has written I had no maps and was anxious to use my navigator, but found it was not compatible with my car. I Googled to find someone who had the same problem and that person has a really good solution. Keep in mind that I had no maps before, so the steps were different. Although there are many factors influencing the prognosis of patients with metastatic breast cancer, a few result in a significant impact. In the present report, we focus on prognostic factors that were established early in the course of treatment of our 35 patients with metastatic breast cancer that appeared between 1975 and 1988. The patients included 10 who had elevated levels of carcinoembryonic antigen (CEA) or alpha-fetoprotein (AFP) in their serum at the time of diagnosis, 8 who failed to respond to first-line chemotherapy for metastatic disease, and 17 who failed second-line chemotherapy. We used 5-year progression-free survival rates as the endpoint for survival analyses and examined potential relationships between clinical factors, type of treatment, and disease outcome using Cox's proportional-hazards model. The 5-year progression-free survival rate for patients with a CEA  $\geq$  5 ng/ml at diagnosis was 0%, and it was 63% for patients with an AFP  $\geq$  10 ng/ml ( $p = 0.007$ ). The 5-year progression-free survival rate for patients who failed to respond to first-line chemotherapy was 20%, which was worse than the rate for patients who had CEA  $\geq$  5 ng/ml (53%,  $p = 0.022$ ). The 5-year progression-free survival rate for patients who failed second-line chemotherapy was 0%, which was worse than the rate for patients who had CEA  $\geq$  5 ng/ml ( $p = 0.002$ ) or an AFP  $\geq$  10 ng/ml ( $p = 0.007$ ). All of the patients who showed stabilization of their disease with second-line chemotherapy or who had a CEA level Take the concept of "happy hours" and pair it with a free booze, and you're on the right path.
