Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a connector assembly, and particularly to a connector assembly with a sliding fastener. 2. Description of the Prior Art U.S. Pat. No. 5,735,655 to Song discloses a waterproof connector including an electrical connector body, a shielding shell engaged in the electrical connector body, a gasket mounted in the electrical connector body and located between the electrical connector body and the shielding shell for forming an outer wall of the electrical connector body, and a fastener attached to the shielding shell and located between the electrical connector body and the shielding shell for securing the electrical connector body and the shielding shell together. The electrical connector body defines a plurality of terminal modules that each include a contact module and a body module that is connected to the contact module and that electrically connects with the shielding shell. Each contact module has a corresponding pair of front and rear contact slots that are arranged in a contact module back-to-back and that are perpendicular to a longitudinal direction of the contact module. The front contact slot receives a contact of an electrical cable, and the rear contact slot receives a second contact. Each body module includes a terminal pad and a pair of through holes that are formed through the terminal pad in a thickness-wise direction and that are in alignment with the front and rear contact slots. The fastener is attached to the shielding shell and includes two bars that are parallel to 5b5f913d15
