AutoCAD's uses AutoCAD is used for designing AutoCAD is used for designing various kinds of mechanical, electrical, civil and architectural engineering drawings. The software is used for the design of building construction and in other fields where 2D drawings are used to communicate the design. The drawings can be printed and rendered for 3D visualization. AutoCAD includes features such as: Drafting and design The basic function of AutoCAD is to allow users to create, modify and view 2D drawings for the purposes of 3D visualization, documentation and print. It is available in various platforms: desktop computers, tablets and smartphones. Layers A Layer is a technique used to organize CAD drawings. By using layers, you can combine blocks and text objects into groups or make parts of the drawing transparent or invisible. 2D and 3D drawings AutoCAD is designed to allow the creation of 2D and 3D drawings. AutoCAD includes special commands for the creation of architectural drawings such as: Columns and beams Curves and splines Text A selection of drawing and drawing commands For creating 2D drawings, a selection of drawing commands including: Draw Select and stretch Move and rotate Clip Extend Colour Define centre Draw guides Rotate, scale, mirror Create and modify 2D drawings Draw, align, snap, text, include and path options are available for creating 2D drawings. You can also edit existing 2D drawings, include objects, and create 3D visualization. Drawing simplification Drawing simplification is a feature that organizes complex drawing into simpler forms that contain fewer features. You can also: Create new views Hide objects Redraw simplification rules Drawing simplification is used to decrease the number of individual objects and symbols in a drawing. The creation of 3D drawings Drawing and model commands that are used for the creation of 3D models in AutoCAD include: Scenes Surfaces Faces Orientation and base Surface modelling commands allow you to change the orientation and base of your 3D model. You can also control various things such as: Tolerance Collision Selection

I'm new to the Mac App Store and I would like to organize my apps into folders to keep them all together. I'm looking for a GUI app or command line way of doing this. A: You can do this in the Finder in System Preferences. The new Applications preference pane preferences Let me explain in more detail. Go to System Preferences > Applications. Note: The Applications preference pane doesn't appear unless you have at least one application installed. Drag the application from the Applications preference pane to a folder in the Finder. Open up the folder containing the application by clicking the + button, or use the command+shift+G key combination (you can change the keyboard shortcuts in the preference pane). Click the - button to remove the application. Click the arrow next to the folder's title and choose Move to Trash. That's it. ." You should see the License key in a plain text in the License key field. A: Try installing the Autocad Core Library (any version) to your folder, then using the key you generate in your launcher. And before you start doing that, uninstall and remove your trial version, as it might conflict with it

Gatorade: Making It Rain (Again) I love living in the United States. We're blessed with such amazing athletes and sports in this country. It is truly an amazing place to live. However, when I look at the history of college athletics in this country, it's no wonder we have such a problem with concussion. College athletes get injured all of the time, and every single day a new story emerges that is very troubling for the future of sports. However, in the past two weeks, two events that occurred last week have really made me lose faith in the college athletic system. The first event was the University of Florida Gators football team being undefeated and ranked No. 1 in the country. While this is awesome for the players and the school, it is bad news for those who love college football. This is because this means a lot more money for the school and their sports programs. Gatorade is the official beverage of the Gators and the man behind Gatorade is none other than disgraced former head coach Urban Meyer. So what happens when the team starts to look good and no one is complaining? Well, Gatorade takes that action by making more money. This week, Gatorade will be making $20 million more off of Florida football players. After our National Title in January 2012, Gatorade made $100 million from us college football players. During that time we were still not allowed to be paid for the Gatorade commercials that we had to wear. However, by the time all was said and done, we had made $200 million off of being the face of Gatorade. The $100 million came out of the pockets of the players, not Gatorade. Now with that happening, the best way to ensure continued success for Gatorade is to make more money off of the players, and the best way
