Color Bar Generator is a lightweight tool that allows users to generate, preview and test a variety of color bars. To do this, simply press the "generate color bar" button, and the plugin generates an attractive and highly useful output pattern. The tool can produce a number of color bars in addition to the familiar SMPTE NTSC standard. In addition to these, there is also an EIA style RGB color bar and two other output options namely, chip diagrams and alignment charts. As far as using the tool, it is intuitive and quite simple. To begin, an input RGB value is selected from the available range and a corresponding RGB value is displayed in the preview box. After making the desired adjustments, simply press "generate". The final image is displayed immediately. If any issues are encountered during testing, users can easily find a guide online, complete with detailed instructions. With Color Bar Generator, you can generate a number of useful standard and custom color bars, save and share them and test your current transmission channel for viewability, color accuracy and general system performance. To learn more about Color Bar Generator and how to use this plugin, please visit its official website: Comments Have a look at the video tutorial about Color Bar Generator and learn how easy it is to create vector elements and output patterns with it. There is a lot more to the addin than can be seen in the video, however, in addition to the generation of color bars the plugin also supports SMPTE NTSC, EIA and raw RGB calibration testing and can even give users some insight into color levels, gamma curves and more. If you are using a Mac, download the free app Color Bar Generator, simply drag the plugin into the app window and just follow the instructions from there. I must admit, I'm interested in working with this program, but I can't justify spending $100 for something that I can get for $10 or even $5 elsewhere. Does it do the same thing as the free one on the website? I must admit, I'm interested in working with this program, but I can't justify spending $100 for something that I can get for $10 or even $5 elsewhere. Does it do the same thing as the free one on the website? Thanks. It's not really $100, this is only about $35 Quote: Originally Posted by cbramatic I
