Role of T(3) lymphocyte and thyroglobulin in the activation of the immune response and the formation of a eugonadal immune complex. Using male mice of strain C57BL/6, we have characterized a non-immunogenic molecule present in the thyroglobulin (Tg) from male mice. This molecule, non-Tg (NTg), represents approximately 5% of the Tg; it is bound with high affinity to antibodies directed against Tg. When tested in a heterologous system (ie, RBA), it is able to induce in vitro the formation of an immune complex between monoclonal antibody specific for the Ly 1.1 B cell surface marker and the NTg molecule. The NTg appears to be bound to the antibodies through a specific receptor that is partly T-lymphocyte dependent but not to Tg receptors. The non-Tg molecule is also partly soluble and can be recovered by acid treatment of thyroid extracts from mice of the same strain of origin as the NTg molecule. When administered to hypothyroid mice, the NTg produces a euthyroid state. This finding reinforces the role played by the thyroglobulin in the formation and release of the T(3) hormones. The NTg also induces a transitory immune response that yields strong mixed lymphocyte reactions. The significance of the release of NTg at a very low rate in the blood is unknown, but it may play a role in clearing polypeptide antigens from the circulation.Q: Is a floating point number stored in
