Along with all the usual tabulations and results, according to the mainstream media reports, there are problems with the voting machines, the election officials, and the voters. This is one of the reasons that I have taken so much interest in voting machines. I don't often actually vote, but I do vote in Presidential elections.

Does what it says on the tin: controls as "tight" as it possibly can, and if you're a FIFA fan you know that does mean pretty much all of them, and they all work well. Great dribbling, passing and shooting, and the AI is amazingly effective and intuitive. The stadiums have a stunning fidelity to the old games, and the already great commentary is, I find, better than ever. One of the most impressive features for me in recent years is the new crowds, and it's really come along in a way that I didn't expect, with the commentary helping to fill in the gaps a little. I've also noticed that the Premier League teams are near-perfect, which is a very welcome step up from FIFA 21, which I found a little less than stellar. If you like organised and expansive football, this is a good game to buy. What's new? Powered by Football: The game engine gets a significant overhaul. New Real Player Motion: Feel the full power of a high-powered athlete. New Movement System: Players now have their own unique set of movement options. Matchday: FIFA Ultimate Team modes now follow a home and away theme, with different kits and broadcast teams for each game. FIFA Ultimate Team: Ultimate Team's main mode returns, with 200 licensed teams. FIFA 2K: Soccer returns to the series and features improved player accuracy. Follow your favorite team in the region of your choice and compete in the International Cups with the best global clubs. Dynamic Tactics –  What are you going to do when the opposing team rolls back on your goal line? Dynamic Tactics allow you to adapt your formation, style of play, and which players to use depending on the conditions. Adapt to the field, including using flanks, counters, and offsides. Double Gameweek –  In The World Cup, each of the 32 players in the FIFA World Cup squad play their matches in separate Gameweeks, with only a single match per day. FIFA 22 allows you to select two different players to use for any single game, including the World Cup, for the first time in the series. Steady Shot Control –  Steady Shot Control –  In previous versions of the game, your shots were powered by a head-up view on the ball until you released the pass. Now, your shots are powered by a default field of view of what is in front of you. Players will naturally adjust their movement and positioning during these shots, but this will allow for better feedback for every player when they receive a pass or are in shooting position. Picks & Rolls –  When you use the Trickshot Control Ability, you can assign a tool to control your shots. Picks and Rolls now randomly pick a tool between two choices, and you can assign a tool to your Headers, Finishers, and Set Piece Abilities. Dynamic Crosses –  In the old versions of the game, to make a cross, you simply had to hold the crossbar button to send the ball. In FIFA
