Once a year, a team of over 100 individuals in 26 countries scours the globe for the best food, drink, and spirit happenings. This year, the New York office's culinary team investigated, tasted, and celebrated the flavors of every continent. Gourmet magazine's list of the World's 50 Best Bars is part paean and part cautionary tale about the humble craft cocktail. Among the great cocktail joints, top-tier mixologists, and standout mixological destinations, one spot inevitably stands out as the rarest cocktailery in the world: the "bar dedicated to the art of mixology that blends great bartenders with great ingredients." Lucky for you, only ten of the world's best restaurants—from New York to Copenhagen to Mexico City—have achieved this lofty status. For some, it's the result of David Lanzone's hard work. For others, it's just the result of "good ingredients, a willingness to experiment, and a bit of stroke." The James Beard Foundation has announced its list of semifinalists for the 2014 James Beard Awards. The full list of culinary finalists, which includes up to three people from each region, will be announced in May. The winner will be announced June 1st during the 2014 James Beard Foundation Awards Ceremony at the Lyric Opera House in New York City. In his latest cookbook, the brilliant chef tackles some of the most important questions of modern cooking: What is barbecue? Is it pork or beef? How about pork? What is kimchi? The answers: pig, pig, pig. The only way you can make sense of Eat and Burn is through scientific experimentation. It is the kind of book that's fun and fascinating, but requires more time than you have. Chef Brian O'Neill has done a tremendous job of creating a logical, unflinchingly honest, and academically sound study of various ingredients, their flavors, how they taste, and how they can taste. It's a survey of liquid and solid foods, from fire-kissed
