Leenie Boog is a self-taught artist and VR developer creating immersive experiences with intuitive gameplay in a lovable visual style. His goal is to push the boundaries of VR storytelling and create content that delights and inspires. Website: Twitter: Facebook: Youtube: Steam: Google Play: What inspired you to make this? I got a PSVR and I'm still new to the VR world. It was a bit daunting to start to figure out what to make, so I made Kartoffl, an homage to the classic game Lemmings in VR. I think Lemmings is a fun game to play and I wanted to just make something and have fun with it :) How does it work? Kartoffl is inspired by Lemmings. The big spuds are creatures that run through rooms. In each room they can't go up and they can go down but not in straight lines. If they run into blocks like pipes or spikes or other creatures of their own species, they die. You need to place blocks of the same type in the path for the spud to run over, to either escape or to kill their fellow spuds. Can you escape? What's in the future for this game? I would love to have a simple VR platformer that I can share with the family and be able to easily just walk in and play with my kids. Kartoffl is a lot of fun, and I'm really excited to keep making new content and sharing it with others. It's an experiment I'm really enjoying and want to share. ## What's new:

ert on the Coast is a monthly column by Kim Wittenberg and Cathy Spaulding. The two writers and friends have been writing about the places, people and cuisine of the coastal Granite State for more than a decade. Fern Broome | Special to The Union Leader Southwest WATCH: On the eve of her birthday, Fern Broome shared a special glimpse of life at the historic Little Noyes School in Hampton with her daughter Amanda Wakely | GEORGE

VENEKOUKAS/Union Leader One of the great things about childhood is the exuberant and playful days of growing up, the one's in which a parent is often absent. Fern Broome had a privileged childhood in which there wasn't a single day when she didn't feel like the most loved, most beautiful girl in the world. Unfortunately, hers and her mother's lives were upended by the death of her father, the loss of him as a tie to the past and the damage done to her mother's health by, most say, depression. In an effort to regain balance, understanding and purpose, she moved from Maine to New Hampshire, her home, and created one of our state's most beloved series of cookbooks, Maine Coast Cooking, and the blog Fernskillet. Given the deeply mysterious and spiritual nature of the eastern coastline, we asked Fern to tell us about her hometown of Hampton, New Hampshire, and the beautiful place that inspired her to create Fernskillet. Here are her stories in her words.

Fern Broome on life in Hampton: A lot has been written about me sitting in restaurants across New Hampshire, enjoying lobster and "Fernskillet Coast Cooking". People around here still talk about when I told them I was moving to Hampton. I can try and take credit for the stop sign or the turn of the mill. It doesn't always happen during my driving. The most amazing part of it is I can even be a little more patient with my kids. I'm more likely to kiss them. Story continues below advertisement. What's your connection to the Little Noyes School in Hampton? What about it inspired you to write "Coast Cooking" or start the blog? Hoping Little Noyes School in Hampton N.H. The
