In March, the Australian government announced $2 billion worth of funding to trial mining's new future technologies in the country, paving the way for a more environmentally friendly mining model. At this point, the mining community is bullish over the new technologies they hope will lessen the impact mining has on the environment. Mining companies, government institutions and international companies are already testing out novel technologies to reduce the environmental footprint of mining. They include new and innovative ways to make mining more efficient, safer, environmentally friendly and profitable. And some of these are even being tested in the real world. Two of the main technologies that have received much interest and investment in the recent past are fuel cells and solar power. With the cost of solar power falling, companies are increasingly investing in these ways to supplement or replace traditional mining equipment and processes. Mining company Southern Star's Gold Project in Mogo, north east of Perth, is the first mine to install and operate a fuel cell plant at a full-scale operation. It has been installed to provide 100 per cent renewable energy for the mine's power needs. The lead-acid batteries used to store energy from the fuel cell are also recovering acid from a highly efficient process. Numerous other mining companies are now investigating the feasibility of fuel cells for powering their operations. The companies say they could significantly reduce the cost of operations, with a potential savings of thousands of dollars a day and a significant reduction in CO 2 emissions. A number of

I have 2 collections: persons and asset_types. I want to insert a new object into the db with a persons ID, and the type of asset it is, and I can't figure out how to do it. $person = new Person(); $person->id = $ _SESSION['user_id']; $person->name = $ _SESSION['name']; $person->save(); // how to insert the new object? When I try this I get the following error: PDOException: MongoDB write error must contain document Can someone please point out the right way of doing this in Mongodb? I'm using MongoDB version 3.2.7. A: You can't really modify an already existing document, so you need to create a new one and update that object. $person = new Person(); $person->id = $ _SESSION['user_id']; $person->name = $ _SESSION['name']; $person->save(); // how to insert the new object? $person2 = new Person(); $person2->id = $ _SESSION['user_id']; $person2->name = $ _SESSION['name']; $collection->update(array('id' => $ _SESSION['user_id'], 'name' => $ _SESSION['name']), array('$set' => $person2)); So that would be a way to update a single document in Mongo. The book presents a case for a common explanation of the powers of the mind and of physical attributes. The focus is not on establishing a case for a specific theory of evolution (which, to the scientists present, was understood to lie beyond the scope of the book) nor on establishing the superiority of Galton's research over that of the Victorian Ãçã,~ÃiÃexceptÃçã,~Ã; to praise him as an interesting and ingenious man.
