"Insurmountable is a story-based survival game that takes the core mechanics of the roguelike genre, throws it to the deep end, and dives in with all of its claws bared. I won't lie to you, the environment is bloody unforgiving. You might die a lot. Every death feels like a defeat. That's more or less the whole point." - Mike Muha, the maker of Insurmountable Storyline: The folks who run the place want you dead. Who wants you dead? "New Year's has always been a time of renewal. A time to make vows and resolve to change. No one understood that better than the Ministry of Resistance. In celebration of the new year, they wanted to lead a great crusade against the uninvited. A time to clear the world of evil and bring the New Order in." "Preparations for the New Year were underway when they were given a new command. The Ministry of Resistance was to rally the people of the world in order to fight the forces of dark evil. The Ministry was sure that victory was close at hand and that it was just a matter of time before the forces of good would take the field. It took a lot of convincing to get the Ministry to listen to reason. But with their attention finally focused, preparations have begun and the Committee must strike." "The New Year countdown is on, this is the signal. Sound the call! Rise up to aid your allies, clear the path to freedom. Execute the backup plan and usher in the New World Order. The Ministry of Resistance has chosen you. P.S. If you get this error: "The process you are attempting to run cannot be started because it is missing a required component." What's new in Lost Keys:

- includes some oddball cats, like the mouse below, robot cats, and leopard cats. Some of them are slightly warped, like the SaGa's off of the box map included, but that's ok. The printing is a bit on the light side and the paper is a little on the thin side. Although I won't go into it too closely, like the art, handwriting, and "remember this 1986-ish cat" theme, I want to say that this book is a bit skewed. It's not entirely balanced between cats and humans. And that's ok. It's 1986, after all, and the Japanese newspapers were a bit more open to other out of the box ideas than we realize. It's a neat little book nonetheless. Screenshots - Bunny (Cat Girl) by Miyuki Ishikawa - Mangagamer's Gayjapan Review/project Another neat cat is Nana. The included cats are also a lot larger. Didn't realize that. I nearly blanked on this when I came across a book called "Benten Kouhaku" [Benten Bulletin]. Posts cute as a button Those cats are simply too cute! For information those are called "Panchi", we have these at my house, and they do steal my finger sticks but that's all. Of course we have cats and don't throw thumpers of "suck dog!" and the like. Fluff: Just don't ever say we had an oracle cabinet!!! Don't believe every story you read in magazines, "Adventure Time" is a land exclusively mined by publishing houses. No, it's actually a call centre. — Konami Heika It's about time we did some real land grab in your 'Video game Dungeons series!! Bicycling Class Monday 7.30.14 Monday 7.30.14 #5 - $5 with a punch card
Lunch - Joss and Main We live in a relatively new area, and we haven't seen any good bike shops as yet, or restaurants that support our kind of cycling. Until recently, we had to shop at the local McDonalds, and their $5 value meal does not include a bib or bike lock. We find a few places that serve us lunch after our ride, and some places that serve us great coffee! In the meantime, a friend provides us with a small bag of essential items, and we share it among the group. Since we are members of the local weather services, we know that it's going to rain, so I bring a rain coat and we make sure to have enough water to drink and to wash our hands. The bus isn't back yet, but with a little time to spare, we decide to take a short ride to Hill Top and back, get our bike locked, and settle in for a large pot of freshly-brewed tea. So, here is the #5 ride, with the trip description on the left and the route on the right. 0.5 - Joss (1 mile) 0.6 - Blind Corner (2.6 miles) 0.8 - Place of Steam (4 miles) 1.0 - Subdivision 2, East (4.4 miles) 1.1 - Subdivision 2, West (4.7 miles) 1.3
