parry watson movie 2016.txt Â· fullversiondecompilerex4tomq4crack Product Key I'm new with regex, so this might sound dumb... A: If it ends with a dot, try r"\.$" instead of r".$". (Actually, it seems like you want the dot to be optional.) UPDATE: Okay, it seems like you want a dot if there's a at the end, but you want a slash if the dot is at the beginning. I'm not sure you can do that with a single regex, but it might be possible with two. To solve that, you could try this: s = re.sub(r"[^/]\.|[^/]$", r"\/", s) Q: Selecting headers depending on headers from first row in table I have an NSDictionary like this: NSDictionary *dict = @{ @"text" : @"some text", @"header1" : @"identifier1", @"header2" : @"identifier2" }; And I have a tableView. Each cell has a unique identifier. Identifier 1 is a button, that needs a header, just like on the first row. As for identifier 2, It is a UILabel. What I want is, when I tap on the first row (with identifier 1), I need to display "identifier1" in the header of identifier 2 in the same cell. The same applies to the cell, that contains an identifier 2. In this case, the header of identifier 1 will contain "identifier2" and the header of identifier 2 will contain "identifier1". Is there a way to do this? A: If you have a specific row number, the usual way to handle it in the tableView:cellForRowAtIndexPath: delegate method would be to check that the particular row number is one that you are interested in, and display the corresponding header: if (indexPath.row == 0) { //Display the header for the cell at the top } else { //Display the rest of the headers } This is your current best option. If you don't have a specific row number, then (if

ISLAMABAD: In a startling act of brainwashing, several young girls who have been kidnapped by Pakistani Taliban on the behest of their parents have begun to sing songs in praise of the Taliban, RAW sources said. The situation is said to be worsening in the Kotli area of Punjab Province and more girls have been kidnapped by the militants. The children are presented with gun and are also told that the youths are willing to die for ‘Jihad’. “If women are not seen on television, men’s honour will not be protected”, the Taliban tell the children. The children are reportedly forced to recite the following lines: “Allah is the best of those who teach. He is the best of those who inspire. He is the best of those who give his life for others”. The abduction of boys is commonplace, but kidnapping of women is on the rise with the Pakistan Taliban. Previously, it was ordinary criminals who kidnapped women. In many cases, girls are abandoned at the local hospital with bleeding wounds, RAW sources said. The kidnapping of women was an act of retaliation by Taliban, according to various videos released by the perpetrators. Many women are forced to dance and sing extemporaneously, in cinemas, mosques or other public places. As these women dance or sing for hours on end, they are psychologically tortured. They may be raped or killed, if they rebel. In a worrying new development, there have been many reports of the kidnapping of children. RAW sources say the trend has increased in the last few months. Female army volunteers are being killed in the name of defending the honour of their homes and communities, RAW sources said. In the wake of the spate of child kidnappings, the UN has called on the Pakistan government to immediately launch an investigation. “We are deeply concerned by the recent kidnapping of children which is the latest violation of children’s rights,” said Jan Kubis, Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs. He added that the children should be immediately recovered. “It is clear that if these children are not immediately returned to their parents they should be reunited with children abducted by adults and adults abducted by minors.” The UN High Commissioner for Human Rights called the abductions to be “absolutely unacceptable”. On Tuesday, the UN Special Rapporteur
