After a two-day trial earlier this year, Superior Court Judge Dennis Montalvo issued the judgment Thursday against Angelina Avedel-Sanchez, who owns Segura's Curiosa in the 1200 block of Main Street, according to the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Amedel-Sanchez had worked for two years at the exotic jewelry store before she was terminated in June 2017, according to a lawsuit filed in federal court. She claimed she was fired in part for objecting to Avedel-Sanchez's inappropriate comments about women and her desire to sleep with male colleagues. In his ruling, Judge Montalvo found that the "unfortunate, but truthful" testimony presented by Avedel-Sanchez's attorney was all part of a "veiled and systemic effort by the defendant to intimidate, and successfully intimidate, the plaintiff to refrain from communicating with her attorney." The judge also determined that Avedel-Sanchez's assistant manager, Yolanda Ramirez, had not only witnessed many of the inappropriate comments but also condoned and encouraged them. "I am very happy with the outcome," Avedel-Sanchez said Friday. "We are glad the judge followed the law. It has been very hard on my family to have to deal with this without representation and without having to talk to the media." Yolanda Ramirez, who now works at Avedel-Sanchez's other store in the same building, said it "is the right decision."
