Q: Rebasing Java classes into submodule in Mercurial

I'm working on an Eclipse project where I have a class (submodule) which I would like to add to the main project. The class is called xyz. I added the class into eclipse, created a Java project, and mavenized it, and after committing it, I went to Mercurial repository (as it's public, we can't use bazaar). To be more specific, I cloned the repo like this: hg clone articles, it is often desirable to bond at least a portion of such article to a microporous substrate to impart strength, rigidity and other properties to the article. It is known to prepare microporous substrates from a hydrophilic hydrogel. Microporous substrates of this type typically comprise a plurality of pores sized to allow the egress of bodily fluids, such as blood, from the interior of the substrate, and to retain within the substrate a suspension medium. Such microporous substrates are described in

U.S. Pat. Nos. 5,814,326, 5,786,352, and 4,881,957, the entire disclosures of which are hereby incorporated by reference. The resulting composite articles comprising the microporous substrates are strong and durable, having many uses as tissue scaffolds. For example, such substrates may be used in preparing composite articles such as heart valves, blood vessels, artificial skin, artificial ligaments, artificial tendons, fascia lata transplant, ligament-bone transplant, and articular cartilage transplant. It is known to prepare articles or components of articles that are combined with microporous substrates. However, a need remains for improved composite articles and methods for preparing such articles.
