Locally available physical tokens, for example: bookmarks, sticky notes, office supplies, and certificates, to avoid the challenges of paper and digital pedagogy of course. 2.1.1 When I was teaching English in a middle school, I liked having your bookmarks on my desk because I would find them. Q: Process Android-specific log files I have a little Android app that runs in the emulator (Android 1.5) and that sends some data to a web server at localhost. My app's log entry to STDOUT is the following: SYSOUT mAh log.txt Fatal Exception for BluetoothClassService running AndroidBluetoothServer example applications, Single: 1 When Android sees this entry in the console it sends it to the following file: 0669-6511/0669-6511.log I have seen some information about a LogCat file but I don't know if this applies to my case. What I want to accomplish is to process the log file and find what the error was when this Exception was thrown. I would like to do that for any file in /sdcard/logs. I've tried to use the lp server but it seems to be a dead end. Any way to do that? A: Here's the code I finally went with: public static BufferedReader readLogFile(File logfile) { FileReader logfileReader = null; try { logfileReader = new FileReader(logfile); BufferedReader in = new BufferedReader(logfileReader); String strLine = in.readLine(); while (strLine != null) { // do stuff with strLine here; strLine = in.readLine(); } } catch (FileNotFoundException e) { System.
