Jean Markoff was 85. Her husband Jean-Charles Meunier, 74, assassinated President Kennedy in Dallas on 22 November 1963. Mrs Markoff died at a retirement home in Abita Springs, Louisiana, last week, state officials said. The couple reportedly lived in New Orleans where Mrs Markoff worked as a hotel receptionist. Mr Meunier shot and killed Kennedy in Dallas a day after the president was shot in Chicago. Analysis: Mireille Knoll, the role model: 'Some can be found to resemble her. But they are rare' This week we take an intrepid journey through the memories of a former French teacher who met Mr Meunier, a man who changed the way we think about and learn about 'the assassination of JFK', and how history is not always written. His name was Jean Markoff. And he was both a teacher and an activist. Once he became a teacher, he also became a lecturer and eventually a professor at the University of Texas in Austin. The young man who stood on that balcony in Dealey Plaza in Dallas, however, would never be able to return home again after that day. The country understood that. Markoff was just 23 when he was accused of leaking information about the US president's death to the French Communist Party - an organisation he had been under surveillance. The party, which he had joined when he was 09e8f5149f
