It is known that among the air particulate contaminants that can be found in the air are particles ranging in size from submicron to micron. These particulates are known as airborne particulate matter, which can include but are not limited to, particles with a size greater than 0.3 microns (μ) and even as small as 0.01 μ . It is known that such particulate matter can impact the efficiency and/or performance of a variety of different devices that incorporate electronic components. This may occur due to problems such as the presence of particulate matter which 6d1f23a050
